

THE WRITING SCHOOLEMASTER:
 Containing three Bookes in one; The first, teaching Swift writing; The second, True writing; The third, Faire writing.

The first Booke, Entituled;

THE ARTE OF BRACHYGRAPHIE: that is, to write as fast as a man speaketh treatably, writing but one letter for a word: Very commodious for the generall encrease and furtherance of learning in all Estates and degrees: the knowledge whereof may easilie be attained by one mo-neths studie, and the performance by one moneths practise. The proofe already made by diuers Schollers therein.

The second Boooke: Named,

THE ORDER OF ORTHOGRAPHIE: shewing the perfect Method to write true Orthographie in our English tongue, as it is now generally printed, used,
and allowed, of the best & most learned Writers:
To be attained by the right vse of this Booke without a Schoolemaster, in short time, and with small paines, by your owne priuate studies.

The Third Booke; is,

THE KEY OF CALYGRAPHIE: opening the readie waie to write faire in verie short time, by the observations of necessarie Rules here set downe, and by the imitation of the best examples that may be procured.

Omne bonum, Dei donum.

Imprinted at London by Thomas Orwin: and are to be solde at the Authors house in the vpper end of the Old Bayly, where he teacheth the said Artes.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE,
 (my singuler good Lord and Master,) Sir
Christopher Hatton Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and Lord Chauncelor of England. All honour, health, and happines.

Mongst so many (Right Honorable) as in this industrious age, endeavour by their trauailes to get vnder the fa-uour and good opinion of your L. be it permitted me the least of thousands through your Honorable course of pardon, to offer vp this small mite, proceeding from my slender capacitie; in token of a good New yeare: which if it might haue stood in such ripening and fruitfull soyles, as others haue obtained, would haue presented a farre welthier oblation: But as Aue Caesar, spoken with deepe and pure zeale, hath been graciously held a salutation; so I presenting the best that I can, in the course wherein I haue trauailed all my life time, I hope your L. wil take it in good part, considering that it is yet the best meanes I can meete withall, to shew the dutifulnes and deuotion of my heart towards your Honour. Thus leauing your L. to thinke of this as it is, or rather this to bee as your Honour shall thinke of it; I turne my writing to praying, for the long life of your Honour, in the highest felicitie.

Your Honours duetifull, and most humble seruant.

To

To the Reader.

I HERE present unto your view (gentle Reader) for your benefit if you imbrace it, three bookes in one, as a simple Newyeares gift, being the first fruites of my pen: Not doubting but that each of them severallie will yeeld speciall profit and pleasure to all such as are disposed by practise to make triall thereof. If any one of them content you, I shall not onely thinke my travell well employed, but shall hereafter bee the better encouraged to doe my best endeuour for your further good; if it shal stand with Gods good pleasure, your liking, and my leasure. So fare you well.

The

The Treface.

Although I haue not as yet tasted of the herb Iris, to gaine eloquence, (as the Troian Orators did,) I hope, though not with Aristotles AXIOMaes to perswade you, yet with Mercuries figges to delight you. I haue drawen for the commoditie of my Countrymen (curteous Readers) a briefe, plaine, and certein Method in the Artes of Brachygraphie, Orthographie, and Calygraphie: Deliuering in the first, Rules for short and swift writing: In the second, for true Writing: In the last for faire Writing. For the first, to satisfie all parties, I haue thought good in few lines to set downe the profit and probabilitie thereof, that my endeuors may be acceptable to the best, and exceed the Ironicall censure of the captious. Brachygraphie, may in apparance seeme difficult, but is in effect verie easie; conteining manie commodities vnder a few principles: the shortnes whereof is attained by memorie, the swiftnes by practize, the sweetnes by industrie. For swiftnes, what one of neuer so slender iudgement doubteth the attaining thereof? Whereas so manie in our age, haue drawne their prooffe by their practize, and by knowledge doo finde, that Milo, who in his yonth carried a Calfe, by continuall exercise in his age, could easely beare an Oxe. Custome is a second nature, and heedfull endenour is the Architect of Sciences: vnlesse therfore Paracian will canill without occasion, it is impossible to doubt of the easie attaining to swift writing: As for the shortnesse thereof, let Batillus, before he looke on and laugh, listen and learne: least with the blushing Cobler, I tie him Prentice to his Slipper. First therefore, (gentle Readers) to approoue the Arte of Brachygraphie, it is contained within certein limits, and most infallible propositions: which prooueth, that it falleth within the compasse of memorie, and is also concluded within our owne Alphabet: the distinction plaine, & not curious: apparant, & nothing doubtfull. The difficultie that may seeme therein, may by practice, and the helpe of memorie be easilie remooved: And where I haue set downe certaine principles and obseruations, whereunto I referre the Students of this Art, inducing them to serch their memorie, by alluding some words of like sence, some of like sound and contrarie sence: and other some altogether contrarie to the words pronounced: know ye, that I conclude all within termes and lymits: in such sort, as what you shall esteeme impossible to bee performed, you shall perceiue easie to be effected: being already attayned by diuers in small time, who haue made prooffe thereof. Then let the incredulous ignorant wrastle with his follie, and in condemning the Art of Brachygraphie, haue either his owne wit in misprision, not able to reach vnto the capable industrie of a child: or els according to the prouerb saie: he hath liberallie sacrificed his wit to idlenesse, in whom also may be verified this sentence: Scientia, neminem habet inimicum, præter ignorantem. But because there are manie that borrowe insatiable contempt from the Panther, foolish scoffing from the Ægyptian Asse, and unskilfull deceit from the Camell: enforcing their brutish imperfections beyond all expectation: to cut away all scruples that may arise: in fewe wordes, I will approoue the most necessarie and especial benefite of Brachygraphie: but the field is so ample, that where as I enforce a beginning, the profites (that present themselves to all in generall) grow almost infinite: so that the loytering Locust cannot anie waies sucke poyson of mislike from these principles: First, this Arte sauoreth somewhat of the old precepts of Antiquitie, differing onelie in this: that the Ægyptians deliuered their Hieroglyckes in portraitures of Herbes, Trees, Beastes, Numbers, Proportions, and such like: I haue reduced it whollie into one Alphabet of Roman or Italian letters: borrowing onelie from Orthographie a tittle or twaine, and from the Grecians a couple of accents.

The Ægyptians science was but priuatlie commodious to their owne posteritie: mine, to all that are capable thereof.

Their

The Preface.

Their documents were onelie certaine demonstrations for the secretes of Philosophie: Mine, a pathway to induce the readie understanding and apprehension of all thinges, that are included within the tearmes of anie Diuine or humaine knowledge whatsoener: For as Logicke, is Aditus ad scientiam, so my Brachygraphie, may rightlie be called, Clavis Scientiarum: sithence, that whosoener shall bee perfect in the same, by hearing, reading, and swift setting downe thereof: maie attaine to that knowledge in verie short time, which our forefathers could not compasse in manie yeares.

Which of you (graue Patrons of all knowledge) may not (if you please) drawe profite from hence: seeing that by this readie helpe, you maie supplie your memories, perfect your readings, publish your conceites, and profite your scholars: Which of you (yong Students) either in Diuinitie, Phisicke, Law, or Philosophie, shall not gather great commoditie from hence? some, by setting downe your readings readilie, and some your Dictata speedelie? For men of state, what maie better pleasure you than Brachygraphie? For by it you maie swiftilie and secreatlie decipher your intelligences: and by seeking to enrich this Arte, drawe such formes of writing, as the curious Descipherer maie sooner breake his braine, than reach to your meaning. What needs more for men that are ledde by reason? Assuredlie (gentle readers) if Phocions reasons preuaile with you, this is sufficient, that experience prooues the Art to bee verie profitable. But for such as shalbe reproouers hereof, being not much unlike the Cypresse trees, which growe high, and outwardlie faire: yet are inwardly fowle and fruitles, and with the carelesse Grecian, delight neither in sound nor in sence; let mee a little drawe my shaft, and hit, not aime, at their follies; who are also like the licentious Sibarites, that chase Cocks from their Cities, for feare of interrupting their sleepes: and they banish booke from their Studies, because they will be allied to idleness.

The Preface.

Their breath is like the Northwinde, bitter, and tempestuous: their iudgements rash, and no lesse perillous, than the headlong Races of the Mauritanian Asles, that break their neckes before they end their Iourneyes. How happie were they, if with the Ciclops, they had but one eye to see well; or no eyes to missee all things. If anie man write, they condemne his Book: if he be unknowen, they dispraise his lines: if no friend, they contemne his precepts. If his Style be humble, it fits not the Subiect: if high, it is too swelling. if meane, it is too slender. If the matter be extraordinarie, they call vs Æsops Apes: if ordinarie, tut, this is common: howsoeuer it be, he is but simple that writ it. But let me intreate you (the fauourable Readers hercof) in regard chiefly of the generall profit and publike right of Schollers, and partly in respect of mine owne cause, to be aduised by Seneca, who counselleth the vnlearned to read, whereby to attain knowledge; and the learned to read, to perfect their learning. Finally, to auoyd tediousnes (which I am loath to entertaine:) For Orthographie, you that are Schollers, either knowe, or should knowe it: How needfull it is, Despauterius, and our Lillie haue taught you; but how corruptly written of manie, & what confusion of sense it worketh to the vnacquainted therewith, (alas) it is too manifest and apparant. To the attaining and perfection whereof, if I haue preuailed anie thing, attribute no lesse unto me, than the Grecians did to him, that added Y græcum, to their Alphabet: since my endeuour and desire, is no lesse than his. For Calygraphie, (wherein I take vpon me, through my long practize, to be able to say something more than ordinarie) if anie depart discontented, condemne me not: if sufficiently instructed, thanke me, and thinke of mee as I deserue. To conclude, (Gentlemen, and others) in a word: If you please to make triall herein; as I promise you profit, so will I alwayes be readie to performe it. Farewell.

BRACHYGRAPHIE.

He Arte of Brachygraphie is verie conuenient and profitable for all yong Students, either in Diuinitie, Phisicke, or the Law: for thereby a man may take a whole sermon or other speach whatsoeuer, verbatim, being deliuered treatable, as best becommeth the grauitie of the Preacher or speaker, and may tend to the better vnderstanding and edifying of the Auditorie. It auaieth also verie much for Ambassadors, Messengers, & Trauailers into farre Countries, for the speedie & readie description of the place, manners, customes, policie, and gouernment of each Nation. It serueth also for an infinite number of vses, which (for breuitie sake) I here omit, leauing them to the more deepe consideration of the wise and learned, who can better iudge of the best and most profitable vses thereof.

THE FIRST BOOKE,

Intituled:

The Arte of Brachygraphie:

that is, of short writing.

This word Brachygraphic signifieth short writing. It consisteth of two parts.

The first part, is to learne to write the letters of the Romane or Italian hand most speedilie, and plainlie.

The second part, is to knowe perfectly each prick or tittle belonging to euerie letter, and their seuerall places.

Euerie letter with his prick or tittle representeth a word.

There are onlie foure kinds of pricks or tittles to be vsed for the distinguishing of euerie word.

There are twelue places for the pricks or tittles in euerie letter; whereof one prick onlie is vsed with one letter, to expresse one word in one place.

These letters for words, are to be written on forward as in all other ordinarie writing.

The poynts for pausing at the end of euerie sentence, are long strokes set a slope.

The foure pricks or tittles are these.

The first is a full prick or period.

The second is a comma or crooked tittle.

C 2

The

The Arte of Brachygraphie.

The third is a short accent.

The fourth is a long accent.

These foure pricks or tittles are to be vsed with their letters for the foure dozen of words, which are full complete onlie in these two letters C. and S. and diminish more or lesse in all the rest of the words of the table. The period prick serueth for the first dozen: the comma tittle, for the second dozen: the short accent for the third: and the long accent for the fourth dozen.

The twelue places of the pricks or tittles, for euerie twelue words.

The first place, is, a prick ouer the letter on the left side.

The second place, is, a prick ouer the letter on the right side.

The third place, is, a prick right against the top of the letter on the left side.

The fourth place, is, a prick right against the top of the letter on the right side.

The fift place, is, a prick right against the midst of the letter on the left side.

The sixt place, is, a prick right against the midst of the letter on the right side.

The seuenth place, is, a prick right against the foote of the letter on the left side.

The eight place, is, a prick right against the foote of the letter on the right side.

The ninth place, is, a prick vnder the letter on the left side.

The tenth place, is, a prick vnder the letter on the right side.

The eleuenth place, is, a prick right ouer the head of the letter.

The tweluenth place, is, a prick right vnder the foote of the letter.

Orders and Rules to be obserued in the learning of the Arte of Brachygraphie, for your better ease, and more speedie attai- ning thereunto.

First, you are to learne perfectlie without booke, all the words set downe in the Table of Brachygraphie hereafter following, and to lodge euerie word in your memorie, together with the place of the prick thereto belonging, in such sort as they are there placed, for the speciall ease and help of your memorie in the sure holding and reteining thereof: which order in the learning of the Table of words will saue you a great deale of labour and studie in the whole Art.

When you learne the words without booke, take no more but one dozen at once: for throughout the whole Table, the words are all deuided into dozens, except some od words in the end of some of the letters; The number of which od words are also aswell to be had in memorie, as the number of the dozens: hauing also in speciall remembrance the first and last words of euerie dozen; to the end you may readilie know how euery dozen beginneth and endeth, which maketh greatlie for your purpose.

And for your better help of memorie in the learning of your words without booke, you may lodge therewithall in your mind euerie letter and tittle of each dozen, by committing to memorie the number of the place of euerie seuerall word. As thus: In the first place lodge the first word; in the second place, the second word: and so to the twelue place: Then begin againe with the next dozen, obseruing the like order, to the number of twelue: which you may vse throughout the whole Table of words: except in the od words in the end of some of the letters: which od words you must reteine in your memorie by themselves, and by their number and places, so farre as they extend.

If your memorie cannot serue you to take a whole dozen of words at once, you may take but halfe a dozen at once: if that be too much, you may take but two words at once, which may be called a paire : and so you haue fixe paire to a dozen, euerie paire being sutable by themselves, and agreeing together by a contrarietie, in the direct placing of their prickes, right one against another.

This being so perfectlie learned that you are able not onlie to rehearse all the words of the Table without booke, in the order aforesaid; but that also you can speedilie make and set downe the proper letter and tittle of euerie seuerall word of the Table that shalbe confusedlie read or spoken vnto you: you are then to peruse and marke diligentlie the References of all other words vnto the words of the Table of Brachygraphie.

It shall not be materiall or needfull for you to learne the words of References without booke, but to marke the manner of the referring thereof vnto the words of the Table.

In the writing and practise of this Arte of Brachygraphie, you are to obserue verie diligentlie and speedilie, when a word is either spoken or read vnto you, whether that word be in your Table of words, or no. If it be, then are you to set downe the letter and tittle for the selfe same word onlie, without any other difference. But if the word be not in your Table of words, then are you to take such a word in your Table as your selfe shall thinke to come so neere vnto it in sense or likenes, as your memorie will best reteine the same, till you come to the reading thereof: which words of like sense are called Synonimies. If you cannot readilie and speedilie (even at the verie instant of the word named or read) finde a word of like sense or signification, or so neere in sense as your memorie can presentlie take hold thereof, then are you to bethinke you speedilie of some word in your Table that is of contrarie signification to the word pronounced, and to lodge it therewith.

And that you may the better knowe how to reade what you haue written, and to come neerer to the verie word that was named, or to the neere in sense; if the selfe same word that is in the Table be spoken, you shall not need to write any more but the letter and the tittle onlie for the same. But if

if it be a word of the same sense, you are to make beside the letter and the tittle, a small downe right stroke on the right side thereof, which signifieth the Synonimie, or like in sense. Or els, for the more suretie, you may set the first letter of the word on the right side, following the other letter. If the word be taken by a contrarie word in sense, you are to make a small downe right stroke on the left side or back side of the letter.

I haue also here framed a Table which serueth both for the words of References to the Table of Brachygraphie, and for the attayning to write true Orthographie. As for deriuatiues, the Brachygraphie words of the primitiues maie serue to reteyne them with the help of the sense, and the vse of your memorie. As, to write, worshipfull, worship maie serue: For we vse not to saie, To the right worship, but to the right worshipfull: And so right for righteous, wise, for, wisdom, and such like. For if euerie deriuatiue should haue his prick or tittle to distinguish him from the primitive, it would charge and encumber this Arte with too manie pricks and tittles.

All words of like sound, though of contrarie sense, are to be written alike with the same letter and tittle, as, sound and swound: here and heare, rod and rode, and such like.

All comparisons, number and tence, I referre to be taken by the sense and helpe of memorie, taking onelie the present tence and singuler number, as in the Table of Brachygraphie is expressed.

For numbers vse figures, and for proper names that are significant, vse your Brachygraphie: as way, wayt, &c. Or els, take the two first letters of euerie name, and so commit the rest to memorie.

For Repetitions, write the letter r without anie tittle, and for the words repeated, take the first word by Brachygraphie: And that you maie the better knowe how much is repeated, include those words that are repeated with a Parenthesis.

The Arte of Brachygraphie.

For circumlocutions or phrases, take a word of Brachygraphie: as for, he took his journey, he rode; and commit the phrase to memorie.

Now, to conclude brieflie: learne your Table perfectlie; write your letters swiftlie; conceiue your words quicklie; exercise your memorie; practise to write daylie, and you shall attaine speedilie to this Arte of Brachygraphie.

The order of Orthographie: Shewing a most readie and easie waie for the knowledge of writing true Orthographie in our English tongue: By a few briefe rules and obseruations.

How expedient and necessarie the knowledge of Orthographie is, in our English tongue, it is verie manifest: without which, faire writing little or nothing auaileth: Neither is it vnknowne with what difficultie and expence of labor and time, true writing hath heretofore been learned and gotten: And although such as vnderstand the Latine tongue, haue so much the sooner and more easelier attained thereunto: Yet they which were either vtterlie ignorant in the Latyn tongue, or haue but a small taste thereof, haue verie hardlie or litle preuailed, without long time and great labor. I haue therefore (though least able among so many excellent and learned men) for the benefite chieflie of my Countrymen, and partlie for the benefit of Strangers: presumed to set downe a few briefe rules and obseruations, which being duellie obserued and practised in such manner as hereafter is expressed: will speedelie and effectually bring great profite and pleasure to all such as shall thinke good to employ their studie and trauaile therein, at their conuenient leasure.

First, reade a leafe or twaine of some English booke, and diligentlie marke what words seeme hard vnto you to write, and gather them together by writing them into some paper booke: and that you maie the better be acquainted with them, when you shall haue occasion to vse them, write and reade them ouer so often, till by marking how the words are written, you shall finde your selfe somewhat perfect therein.

Then proceede to write and reade further in the same booke, or some other, and vse the like exercise but one moneth neth together, and but one houre in a daie, and you shall finde great profite thereby.

And when you shall haue occasion to write either to your friend or otherwise, or if you will voluntarie make triall how you haue profited therein; whē a word seemeth doubtful vnto you, (as I would aduise you to doubt verie often, till you be somewhat perfect) then search the Table of Orthographie by the same letter, and set downe the word as you shall finde it there written: which exercise preuaileth greatlie to your furtherance in true writing of English.

And for words of one sound, but of double or treble signification or more, I would wish you to marke them speciallie, as I haue here set downe a fewe for example sake.

Aier and heire, thus: The aire is cleere. Some and heire. Raine, reigne, and reines, thus: The raine falleth. The Queenes reigne. The reines of the back. To, too, and two, thus: Glorie to God. Not too little. These two Kings. With manie such like, as in the Table of Orthographie, you maie finde them by the letter, when you haue occasion to vse them.

I haue also made a Table of the Christian or proper names of men and women, such as are most common in vse: which you maie also vse when you shall doubt in the true writing of anie of them.

FINIS.

The Key of Calygraphie: that is, of faire writing.

C A P. I.

For the choyce of your penknife.

In all kinde of Artes and Sciences, the most exquisite workmen haue alwaies desired and sought the best instruments, for the better perfecting of their worke intended: so, for the more speedie and sure attaining to the Arte and knowledge of faire writing, the best things for that purpose are to be provided. First therefore for the choyce of your penknife, a right Sheffeld knife is best: a good Razor is next, being not too thicke or too thinne grooved. Manie other knives there are indifferent good, but these two first named, hold commonly best in prooffe.

And for the better keeping of your knife in good edge, it is verie convenient and necessary, that you be furnished with the finest whetstone, called a hoane: the white hoane is the best, the blacke is next, and slate will serue for a shifte; refusing utterly the hard whetstone, except your knife be verie blunt. But after you haue well whetted your knife on the hoane or slate, it is verie good to smooth the same vpon the vpper drie leather of a shoe, which will make it to cut the more kindly: For the better remembraunce whereof, I haue here set downe a plaine English verse.

Provide a good knife; right Sheffeld is best.

A razor is next, excelling the rest,

The Key of Calygraphie.

*A whetstone likewise of hoane that is white,
Will make your knife cut your penne well to write.*

For the choyce of your quills, and the making of your pen.

C A P. 2.

Choose the second or third quill of euerie wing, bee-ing round and hard; you may knowe them by the narrownesse of the feather toward the end thereof:
then cleanse them well with the backe of your knife, and tourne vp right the backe of the quill, and giue thereon a little cutt, and with the end of the quill make the slit thereof verie cleane without raggednes or teeth. In the making of your pen, obserue the olde verse, Dextra pars penna lenior breuior debet esse, The right side of your penne more light and short must be: but in the fashioning thereof, it is not so materiall as in the nicking of it, which is the last cut, either vpon your naile, or vpon another quill, yet make it as seemely as you can. In the nicking or last cut of your penne, (which is the making or marring thereof) you must be verie warie, that you cut not the right side too short: for then your pen will beare too much on the lefte hand, and so scratch the paper and scatter the inke. The best way is, to cut it a little a slope, being sho-ter toward your right hand as you write therewith: or els both the nebs to be of a length is almost as good: and for the smalnes or bignes of your pen, if you desire to haue it smaller, take the lesse off with your knife in the nicking thereof: If you haue taken too much, then cut it again on the sides, till it be fit for your purpose. In the nicking also of your pen, hold not your knife down right, nor too much a slope, but indifferent betwéen both. And for hardnes or softnes of your penne, and to fit it to your own hand as you may best write therewith. If your pen be too

The Key of Calygraphie.

too hard, then pare the quill a little thinner on the backside of the clift thereof, or make the clift of the neb somewhat longer than ordinarie, or both, if one will not serue: but if your pen be too soft, then make the clift and the neb thereof somewhat shorter than ordinarie. If you be not presently provided of quills hard enough, you may harden your softe quills, by putting them into hote ashes, till they bee for your purpose. And for your better memory thereof, let these few verses serue.

*Make choyce of quills, the best that may be found,
Of seconds or thirds, both hard, good, and round.
Then clense your quill well, and slit your pen cleane,
To better your writing, it will be the meane.*

*And with that old verse let your pen agree,
That the right side more light and short may be.
But in the nicking of your pen take heed,
That the right side be not too short indeed.*

*And if your pen be too weake or too stiffe,
Help it you may in the neb and the cliffe.*

If it be hard, make neb and cliffe longer:

If it be soft, then shorter and stronger.

Thus by this rule, (if well you understand)

Soone may you make a pen fitt for your hand.

For the holding of your pen, and the placing of your arme.

C A P. 3.

First, holde your penne betweene your two forefingers and your thumb: let your thumb be highest, your forefinger next, and your middle finger lowest. Next, hold your pen softly in your hande, with no more strength than is needfull: for by griping the penne ouer hard, you shall wearie both your fingers, your hand, and your wryst, and so write verie vneasily. Then leane softly

The Key of Calygraphie.

vppon your penne: for by ouer hard leaning thereon, you shall marre your penne and the letter both at once. Lastly, write softly, especially at the first, when you begin to learne: for by ouer fast writing, you shall soone catch an ill tricke, which will not be so soone left. Holde not your pen too vpright in your hand, nor too much aslope, but iust betwene both: nor beare your thumbe so stiffe, but that it may easelie bend when occasion serueth, for the better conueyance & carriage of your hand. Let not your pen be too full of inke, for feare of blotting: and when it writeth not cleane, or is ouer woꝛne, either wipe it, or mend it: If you would write smaller, tourne your pen a little moꝛe a side, and write with the lower neb thereof.
 Place not your elbowe too close to your bodie, nor too farre of from it, but in a comely and easie manner lay both your armes before you, as it shall best beseme you, and as it shall be most easie for you, the better to endure to write, when you haue occasion: keeping these plaine verses in minde.

*Betweene your thumb and your two fingers place
 Your pen to write with comelines and grace.
 Your thumb first aloft, as highest bestowe,
 Your fore finger next, your middle belowe.
 Hold softly your pen, leane lightlie thereon,
 Write softlie therewith, and pause thereupon;
 For swiftnes will come of it selfe anon.
 Ill tricks are soone caught, but not so soone gon.
 Hold not your pen vpright in your hand,
 Nor too much aslope; twixt both let it stand.
 Set not your elbowe too close to your side:
 Nor which is as ill, to place it too wide.
 Alwaies in all things, obserue well the meane:
 To right side or left, too much leane to leane.
 Thus in short time, beginning each thing well,
 Haue you no doubt, your Writing Will excell.*

For.

The Key of Calygraphie.

For the setting of your selfe to write.

C A P. 4.

The best and easiest writing is vppon a Deske, for the better auoyding of too much stooping, whereby your health may be impaired: Place your body right forward, as it shall be most seemely and easie for you: and tourne not your head too much aside, nor bend it downe too lowe, for auoyding of wearines and paine: and for such as haue occasion to sit long, I would wish them to sit soft, for their better enduring to write, providing also all other things for their best ease: and for comforting of the sight, it is verie good to couer their deske with greene, & to vse all other helpes that may be procured, for the preservation of your eyes. And take this short lesson with you.

*Write on a deske, least that you hurt your eyes
By stooping much; which hinders health likewise.
In comelie sort, and with a seemlie grace,
For your best ease, your selfe right forward place.
And tourne not your head too much at one side.
Nor bow it too low, least grieve you betide.
The softer you sit, the longer you may.
Each thing for ease provide by the way.
Then shall you better endure so to doo.
When vrgent occasion compells you thertoo,*

For the good choyce of paper and parchment.

C A P. 5.

That in Writing you may vse the better expedition when neede requireth, it maketh verie much to chuse paper

The Key of Calygraphie.

paper and parchment of the best. Let not your paper be too rough nor too smooth: for being too rough, it marreth your pen; and being too smooth, it will be too slipperie, that you cannot write steadily thereon: but yet of both, the smoother is the better, for thereby you may make your letter the cleaner: and you may helpe it by rubbing it with stanch graine. Choose not your parchment chaulkie, or greasie: If it be chaulkie, then take the chaulke off with a knife and a pumice stone. If it be greasie, then knowe I no helpe for it at all, but to leaue it for some other vse. And take this withall,

*Choose not your paper too hard nor too soft,
For being too hard, it marres the pen oft:
And being too soft, then slippeth your letter;
But yet of them both, the softer is better:
For helpe it you may by rubbing the same
With stanch graine, to make it the better to frame.
As for your parchment, chuse it not chaulkie,
Nor let it be greasie, for that is more faultie.
If chaulkie, then write not till it be gone;
First with a knife, and last with pumice stone:
If greasie it be, then let it alone:
For other remedie sure know I none.*

For the making of your letters.

C A P. 6.

At the first when you either begin to learn to write or to amend your writing, hauing gotten and layd before you letters of the best making and proportion that may well be had, obseruing each rule before remembered, marke well, and diligently view your copie, how euery stroke is made, beginning with the first letter: then

then as befoze goe softly with your hand, when you haue well conceiued in your minde the right shape of the letter; for this is a most sure and infallible rule, that whosoever will write well, must let his minde, his eye, and his hand, go all together in the making of euerie letter: But when anie letter seemeth more hard to be made, then is it verie good to take a drie penne, and to trace ouer the same letter so often, vntil with your wett penne you can wel make the same. In some kinde of hands, by making these three letters a, b, m, rightly, you shall get three quarters of the letters & so haue you but six letters more to make, wherof I can shew the prooffe, if it be required. And in anie case beware that you make euerie letter aright: that is, to begin the first stroke and turning where it should be, and so likewise to doo for the true knitting and breaking thereof. Then proceede in order with the rest of the letters: for order in all things is verie conuenient and necessarie; without which, great confusion will ensue to your memorie, & verie much hinder that which you take in hand. As plainly appeareth by this that followeth.

First haue an eye vnto your coppie set:

And marke it well, how euerie stroake is set:

Then as before, goe softly with your hand,

When in your minde the shape thereof is scand:

This rule is sure, by prooffe right well I know,

Minde, hand, and eye, must all together goe.

But when a letter seemes too hard to make,

Then is it best a drie pen for to take,

And neuer cease, vntill your hand can frame

With your wet pen at last to make the same.

And then proceed in order to the rest,

For order sure, in euerie thing is best.

A, B, and M, if rightly you them make,

Three quarters of the Alphabet doo take:

Then of the rest, but sixe in all remaines,

This haue I showen, to ease you of some paines,

For ioyning your letters together.

C A P. 7.

When your letters are brought to some perfection, then you must learne to ioyne them together, and for the better leading and guiding of your hand to write straight, it is best at the first to rule your paper with lines: For as yong children before they can goe, must of necessitie be led at the first, to make them goe straight and vp-right; euen so, whosoever shall learne to ioyne his letters and words euen together, must needs at his beginning bee directed by ruled lines: Although some verie fondly and absurdly say, that to learne to write by rule is no good way. Nay this out of doubt is good at the first for more assurance in good writing, to write betwene two lines; by the vse whereof, a custome or habie is brought to the hand to write straight, which graceth writing more, than the goodnes of the letter. Contrariwise, if you practise at the first to write without line, or some other helpe to direct you, you shall get such a custome of crooked writing, as you shall verie hardly or neuer leaue it; nay, you shal scarce be able to write strait by line. If you indeuor by practise to place your letters euen at head and at foote, it will make your writing to shewe much better, than when the letters being good, are not orderly placed and ioyned together. Keepe equall distance beewene euerie letter, obseruing well your whites and blackes, that is, to allow as much or as little compasse to your letter, as the fulnes or smalnes of your pen requireth, and as shall best agree with the scantling of your writing: and betwene word and word leaue a space alike, about the breadth of the letter, &c. Lay not your paper too much a wrie before you, but a little a side, for your best ease and comelines therein. before you: and thus blotting as neere as you can, by laying some paper vnder your hand, and by looking to the dipping of your pen, if your standish be too full. Lastly, leaue nothing vndone, that addeth or giueth a grace to your writing, in what hand soeuer it be, keeping alwaies vniformitie therein, as neere as you can, that is, to vse one bignes and proportion throughout all your writing, from the beginning to the ende. But in anie case beware you write not too fast, till you can write well: for struiuing to write fast and carelessly, is the chieftest cause that the greatest number of Clerkes and pen-men at this day, doo write so ill, that there is neither order, goodnes, grace, nor comelines in their writing, neither shall they in hast leaue it, or come to anie amendment thereof, without great labour and practise. By the due obseruation of which rules before set downe, you shall no doubt attaine to faire writing in short time, and let this suffice for that purpose.

*Make ruled lines, the way more plaine to shoue:
For children first must creepe before they goe.
Although some simple sort absurdly say,
That writing first by rule is no good way:
Nay this I finde as triall due assigns,
Tis good at first, to write betweene two lines.
For writing straight, dooth grace the hand better,
Than oftentimes the goodnes of the letter.
To set your letters euen, above and belowe,
Maketh your writing the better to shoue,
Betweene each letter keepe equall distance,
That one with another haue no resistance.
Your whites and your blackes obserue with good beede,
Which maketh your writing, more seemely to reede.*

The Key of Calygraphie.

Betweene word and word keep one letters space,
 Leane nothing undone, that giueth a grace.
 Keepe uniformitie from first to the last,
 And alwaies beware, you write not too fast:
 For writing fast, before you write the better,
 Will cause at last, you make not one good letter.
 With scantling alike, let each word be plaste:
 By keeping these Rules, your writing is graste.

A most speciall and necessarie Rule for perfection in writing.

C A P. 8.

For perfection in writing, there can be found no better Rule than Exercise, which perfecteth all Artes: without which no cunning can be attained therein, nor anie Rule can helpe but this, whatsoeuer shall be tried; whereunto belongeth labour with delight, and diligent heed both of minde, hand, & sight: Still viewing your Coppie, and observing euerie grace and comelines thereof; by the often use whereof, you shall attaine to faire writing in short time. And thus I conclude with these fewe lines.

For perfectnes, no better rule is found
 Than Exercise of euerie Art the ground:
 Without the which no cunning comes to man:
 No Rule can helpe but this, doo what we can.
 Whereto belongs both labour and delight,
 With diligent heede of minde, hand, and sight:
 Still viewing your Coppie, observing each grace;
 So shall you write faire in verie short space.

SWIFT, true, and faire, (good Reader) I present;
Art, penne, and hand, haue plaid their parts in me;
Minde, wit, and eye, doo yeeld their free consent;
Skill, rule, and grace, giue all their gaines to thee:
Swift art, true pen, faire hand, together meete;
Minde, wit, and eye, skill, rule, & grace to greete.

SWIFT writing runnes at Brachygraphies call:
True writing next Orthographie dooth bring:
Faire writing growes by Calygraphies grace:
The one in swiftnes farre exceeds them all:
The other in a meane his noate dooth sing:
The third comes on with soft and gentle pace:
Swift, true, and faire, together ioyne in one:
(My Counrrymen) to profit you alone.
